Come listen to the knowledge members from the Aldrich Society have to share as they present information about what is visible in the night sky from Boylston. After their talk, when the sky is dark, they will assist everyone with using their high powered telescopes to view the night sky. You'll have a chance to use the library's telescope, which is available to borrow from the library throughout the year!

This is a family friendly program. Children ages 6 and older will get the most benefit. Feel free to bring blankets or chairs to sit on and flash lights to walk from the fields to your cars. (This program is expected to begin around 6:30pm. The time may be corrected as the date gets closer.) Registration is required at boylstonparks.org for headcount purposes. This program is fully funded by a grant provided by the Boylston Cultural Council, a local agency which is supported by the Mass Cultural Council, a state agency.
